ZORA

by Laurence Holder
One Woman Show

In the play Zora, we meet author Zora Neale Hurston on Christmas Eve, 1948, in a bus station in New York. Fifty-seven years old and flat broke, she is about to leave the city and return to her home state of Florida. Over the course of the play, she looks back over her life and career, sharing her ups and downs as well as her opinions on race, politics, gender issues, and how the world has treated her.
